Dina N. Truncali's practice includes matters in complex litigation, natural resource damages, products liability, and toxic torts. She is part of the firm's team defending clients in a major engineering, procurement, and construction matter involving breach of contract, professional negligence, and fraud claims arising from a nearly $1 billion agrochemical plant relocation and expansion project. Dina was also part of the trial team for a landmark natural resource damages case involving claims of legacy PFAS contamination in the State of New Jersey.

Dina has experience with many aspects of the litigation process, including motions practice, preparing witnesses for deposition and trial, and advising trial teams regarding the presentation of science-based issues. Understanding that the practice of law can have a significant effect on the lives of people and businesses, she is known to be a critical thinker and takes a holistic view of cases to find the best possible outcome.

Dina graduated from George Washington University Law School. During law school, she was a Legal Intern at the District of Columbia Office of Zoning and the Administrative Conference of the United States. She also worked as a Law Clerk for a private firm where she conducted research and drafted dispositive motions in federal district court. Dina rounded out her law school experience working as a Student Attorney for the Housing Advocacy and Litigation Clinic of Rising for Justice and serving as Senior Production Editor of the Journal of Environmental and Energy Law.
